

NER

NEITHER. pronoun. Not either; nor one nor other.

He neither loves,
Nor either cares for him. Shakespeare's Ant. and Cleo.
Which of them shall I take?
Both, one, or neither? neither can be enjoy'd
If both remain alive. Shakespeare's K. Lear.
Suffice it that he's dead; all wrongs die with him:
Thus I absolve myself, and excuse him,
Who fav'd my life and honour, but praise neither. Dryd.
Experience makes us sensible of both, though our narrow understandings can comprehend neither. Locke.
They lived with the friendship and equality of brethren, neither lord, neither slave to his brother; but independent of each other. Locke.

NEOPHYTE. n. f. [neophyte, Fr. neû; and φύω.] One regenerated; a convert.

NEOTERIC. adj. [neotericus, Latin.] Modern; novel; late.

NEP. n. f. [nepeta, Lat.] An herb.

NEPENTHE. n. f. [νέπενθε and πένθη.] A drug that drives away all pains.

There where no passion, pride, or shame transport,
Lull'd with the sweet neperthe of a court;
There where no fathers, brothers, friends disgrace,
Once break their rest nor stir them from their place. Pope.
NEPHEW. n. f. [nepos, Latin; neveu, French.]

1. The son of a brother or sister.

Immortal offspring of my brother Jove;
My brightest nephew and whom best I love. Dryden.
I ask, whether in the inheriting of this paternal power, the grandson by a daughter, hath a right before a nephew by a brother? Locke.

2. The grandson. Out of use.

With what intent they were first published, those words of the nephew of Jesus do plainly enough signify, after that my grand-father Jesus had given himself to the reading of the law and the prophets, and other books of our fathers, and had gotten therein sufficient judgment, he propos'd alto to write something pertaining to learning and wisdom.

Hooker, b. v. f. 21.

Her fire at length is kind,
Prepares his empire for his daughter's ease,
And for his hatching nephews smooths the seas. Dryden.

3. Descendant, however distant. Out of use.

All the sons of these five brethren reign'd
By due success, and all their nephews late,
Even thrice eleven descends the crown retain'd. Fairy Q.

NEPHRETIC. adj. [νεφρετικός; nephretique, Fr.]

1. Belonging to the organs of urine.

2. Troubled with the stone.

The diet of nephritic persons ought to be such as is opposite to the alkaliescent nature of the salts in their blood.

Arbutnet on Aliments.

3. Good against the stone.

The nephritic stone is commonly of an uniform dusky green;
but some samples I have seen of it that are variegated with white, black, and sometimes yellow. Woodw. Mett. Foss.

NEPOTISM. n. f. [nepotisme, French; nepos, Latin.] Fondness for nephews.

To this humour of nepotism Rome owes its present splendor; for it would have been impossible to have furnished out so many glorious palaces with such a profusion of pictures and statues, had not the riches of the people fallen into different families. Addison on Italy.

NERVE. n. f. [nervus, Latin; nerf, Fr.] The organs of sensation passing from the brain to all parts of the body.

The nerves do ordinarily accompany the arteries through all the body; they have also blood-vessels, as the other parts of the body. Wherever any nerve sends out a branch, or receives one from another, or where two nerves join together, there is generally a ganglion or plexus. Quincy.

What man dare, I dare:

Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear;
Take any shape but that, and my firm nervus

Shall never tremble. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

2. It is used by the poets for finew or tendon.

Strong Thyrilmed discharged a speeding blow
Full on his neck, and cut the nerves in two. Pope's Odyss.

NEVELESS. adj. [from nerve.] Without strength.

There sunk Thalia, nerveless, faint and dead,
Had not her sister Satire held her head. Dunciad, b. iv.

NEVROUS. adj. [νευρικός, Latin.] Well strung; strong; vigorous.

What nevous arms he boasts, how firm his tread,
His limbs how turn'd. Pope's Odyss., b. viii.

2. Relating to the nerves; having the seat in the nerves.

3. [In medical cant.] Having weak or diseased nerves.

Poor, weak, nevous creatures. Cheney.

NEVVY. adj. [from nerve.] Strong; vigorous. Not in use.

NET

Death, that dark spirit, in his net arm doth lie,
Which being advanc'd, declines, and then men die. Sta.
NESCIENCE. n. f. [from nescio, Latin.] Ignorance; the state of not knowing.

Many of the most accomplished wits of all ages, have resolved their knowledge into Socrates his sum total, and after all their pains in quest of science, have sat down in a professed nescience. Glavo. Scip. c. ii.

NESH. adj. [nepe, Saxon.] Soft; tender; easily hurt. Stin.

NESS.

1. A termination added to an adjective to change it into a substantive, denoting state or quality; as, poisonous, poisonousness; turbid, turbidness; lovely, loveliness; from nyre, Saxon.

2. The termination of many names of places where there is a headland or promontory; from nepe, Saxon; a nose of land, or headland; as INVERNESS.

NEST. n. f. [nepe, Saxon.]

1. The bed formed by the bird for incubation and feeding her young.

If a bird's nest chance to be before thee in the way, thou shalt not take the dam with the young. Dent. xxii. 6.

2. Any place where animals are produced.

Redi found that all kinds of putrefaction did only afford a nest and aliment for the eggs and young of those insects he admitted. Bentley.

3. An abode; place of residence; a receptacle. Generally in a bad sense; as, a nest of rogues and thieves.

Come from that nest

Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep. Shakef.

4. A warm close habitation, generally in contempt.

Some of our ministers having livings offered unto them, will neither, for zeal of religion, nor winning souls to God, be drawn forth from their warm nests. Sponfer.

5. Boxes or drawers; little pockets or conveniences.

To NEST. v. n. [from the noun.] To build nests.

The cedar stretched his branches as far as the mountains of the moon, and the king of birds nested within his leaves. Hewel's Vocal Forst.

NESTEGG. n. f. [neft and egg.] An egg left in the nest to keep the hen from forsaking it.

Books and money laid for thew,

Like nefteggs, to make clients lay. Hudibras.

To NESTLE. v. n. [from neft.] To settle; to harbour; to lie close and snug, as a bird in her nest.

Their purpose was, to fortify in some strong place of the wild country, and there nestle till greater fucours came.

Bacon's War with Spain.

A cock got into a stable was nestling in the straw among the horses. L'Estrange.

The king's fisher wonts commonly by the water-side, and nestles in hollow banks. L'Estrange.

Flut'ring there they nestle near the throne, Dryden.

And lodge in habitations not their own.

The floor is strowed with several plants, amongst which the inails nestle all the winter. Addison on Italy.

Mark where the fly directors creep,
Nor to the shore approach too high;
The monsters nestle in the deep,

To seize you in your passing by. Swift's Misc.

To NESTLE. v. a.

1. To house, as in a nest.

Poor heart!

That labour'd yet to nestle thee,

Thou think'st by how'ring here to get a part, Donne.

In a forbidden or forbidding tree.

Cupid found a downy bed,

And nestl'd in his little head. Prior.

2. To cherish, as a bird her young.

This Ithacus, so highly is endear'd

To this Minerva, that her hand is ever in his deeds: Chapman's Minot.

She, like his mother, nestles him.

NESTLING. n. f. [from neftle.] A bird just taken out of the nest.

NET. n. f. [nati, Gothick; net, Saxon.] A texture woven with large interstices or meshes, used commonly as a snare for animals.

Poor bird! should'st never fear the net, nor time,

The pitfall nor the gin. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

He made nets of chequer-work for the chapters, upon the top of the pillars. 1 Kings vii. 17.

Impatience intangles us like the fluttering of a bird in a net, but cannot at all ease our trouble. Taylor's Holy Living.

The vegetative tribes,

Wrapt in a filmy net, and clad with leaves. Thomson.

NETHER. adj. [neoder, Saxon; neder, Dutch.] It has the form of a comparative, but is never used in expressed, but only in implied comparison; for we see the nether part, but never say this part is nether than that, nor is any positive in use, though it seems comprised in the word beneath. Nether is not now much in use.

1. Lower; not upper. No

NEV

No man shall take the nether or the upper millstone to pledge; for he taketh a man's life to pledge. Deut. xxiv. 6.
In his picture are two principal errors, the one in the complexion and hair, the other in the mouth, which commonly they draw with a full and nether great lip. Peacham.

This odious offspring,

Thine own begotten, breaking violent way

Tore through my entrails; that with fear and pain

Distorted, all my nether shape thus grew Transform'd. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. ii.

The upper part thereof was whey, Hudibras, p. i.

The nether, orange mix'd with grey.

A beauteous maid above, but magic arts,

With barking dogs deform'd her nether parts. Recommen.

As if great Atlas from his height

Shou'd sink beneath his heav'nly weight,

And with a mighty flaw, the flaming wall

Shou'd gape immenly, and rushing down o'erwhelm this nether ball. Dryden.

Two poles turn round the globe;

The first sublime in heaven, the last is whirl'd

Below the regions of the nether world. Dryden.

2. Being in a lower place.

This shews you are above,

You justices, that these our nether crimes,

So speedily can venge. Shakespeare's King Lear.

Numbetels were those bad angels, teen

How ring on wing under the cope of hell,

'Twixt upper, nethers, and furlowing fires. Milton.

3. Infernal; belonging to the regions below.

No less desire

To found this nether empire, which might rise,

In emulation, opposite to heav'n. Milton's Par. Lost.

The gods with hate beheld the nether sky,

The ghosts repine. Dryden's Æn.

NE'ITHERMOST. n. f. [super, of nether.] Lowest.

Great is thy mercy toward me, and thou hast delivered my soul from the neithermost hell. Psalms lxxxvi. 13.

Undaunted to meet there whatever pow'rs,

Or spirits, of the neithermost abyss

Might in that noise reduce. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. ii.

All that can be said of a liar lodged in the very neithermost hell, is this, that if the vengeance of God could prepare any place worse than hell for sinners, hell itself would be too good for him. South's Sermons.

Heracles tells us, that the eclipse of the sun was after the manner of a boat, when the concave, as to our sight, appears uppermost, and the convex neithermost. Kailaga. Bur.

NE'ETING. n. f. A reticulated piece of work.

NE'TTLE. n. f. [necl, Saxon.] A stinging herb well known.

It hath an apetalous flower, consisting of many stamina included in an envelopment; but these are barren; for the embryos are produced either on different plants, or on different parts of the same plant, without any visible flower, which becomes a bivalve seed-vessel, sometimes gathered into round heads, and at other times small and hairy, inclining several seeds. Miller.

The strawberry grows underneath the nettle,

And whollom berries thrive and ripen best,

Neighbour'd by fruit of safer quality. Shakef. Hen. V.

Some so like to thorns and nettles live,

That none for them can, when they perish, grieve. Waller.

To NETTLE. v. a. [from the noun.] To sting; to irritate; to provoke.

The princes were so nettled at the scandal of this affront, that every man took it to himself. L'Estrange.

Although at every part of the Apostles discourse some of them might be uneasily nettled, yet a moderate silence and attention was still observed. Bentley.

NE'TWORK. n. f. [net and work.] Any thing reticulated or decussated, at equal distances, with interstices between the in-terfections.

Nor any skill'd in workmanship emboss'd;

Nor any skill'd in loops of fing'ring fine;

Might in their dexter cunning ever dare,

With this so curious network to compare. Sponfer.

A large cavity in the finciput was filled with ribbons, lace, and embroidery, wrought together in a curious piece of net- work. Addison's Spectator.

NEVER. adv. [ne ever, neapre, Saxon; ne æpre, not ever.]

1. At no time.

2. It is used in a form of speech handed down by the left writers, but lately accused, I think, with justice, of sole-cism; as, he is mistaken though never so wise. It is now maintained, that propriety requires it to be expressed thus, he is mistaken though ever so wise; that is, he is mistaken how wise soever he be. The common mode can only be defended by supplying a very harsh and unprecedented ellipsis; he is mis- taken though so wise, as never was any: such however is the common use of the word among the fruit eaters.

By its own force destroy'd, fruition ceas'd,

And always weary'd, I was never pleas'd. Prior.

NEU

Never any thing was so unbred as that odious man.

Be it never so true which we teach the world to believe, yet if once their affections begin to be alienated, a small thing persuadeth them to change their opinions. Hooker.

Ask me never so much dowry and gift, and I will give according as ye shall say. Gen. xxxiv. 12.

In a living creature, though never so great, the sense and the affects of any one part of the body, instantly make a transfusion throughout the whole body. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

They destroyed all, were it never so pleasant, within a mile of the town. Knolles's Hist. of the Turks.

He that shuts his eyes against a small light, would not be brought to see that which he had no mind to see, let it be placed in never so clear a light, and never so near him.

That prince whom you espouse, although never so vigorously, is the principal in war, you but a second. Swift.

3. In no degree.

Whoever has a faithful friend to guide him, may carry his eyes in another man's head, and yet see never the worse.

South's Sermons.

4. It seems in some phrases to have the sense of an adjective.

Not any.
